THE COINAGE QUESTION.

If the proposed national coins are to be introduced, how are they to be used? Are they to be used in conjunction with the United States gold and silver coins, Mexican dollars, English sovereigns, &c., that are now in use, or are they to be used to the exclusion of all other coins?

The answer to this question is a serious one. For it will, no doubt, affect the monetary values and business transactions here to a great extent.

In all other countries where a national coinage is used, it is the only legal tender. In the seaports of commercial countries other coins will be taken, but at less than their face value, and in large commercial centres are to be found brokers who will buy them for bullion or export; but in no case are they to be found, as here, passing as legal tender to an amount above their face value.

To those then who have accumulated money here, in these foreign over-valued coins, it becomes a serious question of what value they will be when the new coinage is introduced. If the new coins are to be used as legal tender, jointly with the other coins, then if they are of higher bullion value, they will be exported as rapidly as the Treasury will issue them, and we shall be paying through the nose for a coinage which is not in use in the country, but for the purposes of export, thus benefiting a few wholesale merchants. If, on the contrary, they are of less bullion value than the foreign coins used with them, the market price of everything will go up, and people will more readily take foreign coins in payment than they will Hawaiian.

If, however, the new coins are to be legal tender to the exclusion of all other kinds, then, they must be of U. S. Standard, both for gold and silver, as by the Coinage Law; and every foreign coin in the Kingdom will simply be worth its value as bullion for export. To be just and fair to the people, in this case the Government must call in all the foreign coins which its edicts from time to time have given a fictitious value, and exchange them for good Hawaiian coins at the rates at which they have made these foreign coins legally current. And, as it is estimated, that there is something like $2,000,000 face value of coin in the Kingdom, they will have a large proportion of this in their hands, which they can only sell or use for bullion at an enormous depreciation on its face value. We fancy that the loss on this phase of the question will considerably more than counter-balance the delusive profit supposed to accrue from coining dollars worth only 90 cents.

IN SEARCH OF A HUSBAND.

One of the Portuguese women who came over on the Hansa has met with some adventures in trying to join her husband. She arrived here with her 3 small children unable to speak a word of English on September 9th, and the only trace of her husband she could give was a dirty scrap of paper, on which his name was written in ink to which another hand had added "Waihee, Maui," in pencil. She was sent to Waihee—no husband, thence to Makawao—still no husband. Then she came back to Honolulu and was met by the Secretary of the Board of Immigration who had her wants attended to, and finally found out that her husband was working at the Star Mills,

Kohala, and was still anxiously awaiting his wandering wife and children. So on Tuesday afternoon she was despatched by the Likeli to meet her husband once more, and to tell of a her adventures and mis-adventures in her effort to find him during the last three months.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The schooner Luka is being hove down for repairs.

The wharves, which have been filled with foreign vessels for a week or two, are now beginning to present their usual empty appearance.

The General Seigel brought 560 bags of rice.

The steamer James Makee will make the circuit of Kauai this trip.

LOCAL AND GENERAL ITEMS.

Who felt that er duqueke mentioned in yesterday's Tiser? and what was it that caused them to feel it?

Two young gentlemen go to visit the same fair one every night. Jealousy and distraction. Which will she take?

The wet weather of Tuesday, which culminated in a heavy thunderstorm during the night, prevented many proposed departures of schooners and other vessels.

Our local authorities seem to have given up the good practice of having the roads scraped clean, just as everybody had begun to see the advantage of it.

Mr. J. U. FAWCETT is kept very busy taking entries for the forthcoming races. We predict some close contests and great excitement after seeing the entries.

The welcome rain has gladdened the hearts of the taro planters, and turned the Esplanade into a sea of mud. When will they proceed to drown a Cabinet Minister in it?

The Marine Railway crew are practicing daily. Their style is the envy and admiration of all the other competing crews and is said to be a treat to look at.

The Custom House officials have raised quite a goodly sum amongst themselves for the fund now being raised by the Committee for the proper celebration of His Majesty's birthday.

We heard from the representatives of the Press and the Gazette, that on Tuesday evening a runaway occurred on Beretania street. No damage done.

We are informed by the Secretary of the Board of Immigration that there are still two Portuguese women waiting at the depot to be employed as domestic servants. They are both desirous of employment. Application may be sent into the Secretary of the Board of Immigration at once.

We see that Mr. J. S. Webb, formerly editor of the Advertiser, has issued a card announcing that he has opened an office as Agent, Accountant and Marine Average Adjuster, at 66 Fort street. We feel sure Mr. Webb's business reputation will gain him many clients, and, from our own knowledge, we can assure them their business will be in capable and gentlemanly hands.

LONDON GOSSIP.

(BY FLANEUR.)

Special for the Daily Bulletin.)

Mlle. Feyghine was unquestionable flighty, and would have put an end to her existence quand meme. She never recovered from her fiasco at the Francis, and, in default of dramatic fame, sought other laurels. Her liaison with the Duc de Morny was a very commonplace affair; a small hotel, a few diamonds, and a carriage, and the bargain was completed. There was no such thing as love about it. But she found the golden fruit too bitter, and moral remorse, added to disappointed ambition, drove her to the coup de pistolet.

Your contributions to our educational establishments have arrived.

I have not seen them yet, but I hear they are not going to waste much time in sight-seeing, but will go to their ultimate destination as soon as can be.

Amongst Cetewayo's suite was a young man named Lazarus Xaba, who acted as native interpreter. This young man is the son of a Zulu farmer, and was educated in Natal. He possesses great influence over Cetewayo, who deferred to his advice in all that he did. In all probability we shall hear of this young man again, for he is evidently destined to play an important part in the future history of Zululand. He is most anxious above all things to establish a business connection between England and Zululand, and immediately on his return home he states that he will call together the more wealthy of his countrymen with the view of carrying out his oft-repeated intentions.

Everyone, I have no doubt, remembers the last flash of Swift's mighty intellect before it sank for ever into darkness:

Here stands a proof of Irish sense,
Here Irish wit is seen;
When nothing's left that's worth defence
They build a magazine.

Has not Ireland furnished us within the last week another proof of this same sense and wit? Mr. Gray, being hard and fast in prison at Dublin, is presented with the freedom of six other towns by those marvellous countrymen of his?

Lord Shaftesbury is of opinion that "the excesses of the Salvation Army are producing great irreverence of thought, of expression, and of action, turning religion into a play, and making it grotesque." His lordship is not alone in that view of the performances of "General" Booth and his rampant hosts. An "army" whose "officers" cause "a campaign" to be advertised in this fashion—Monday, Salvation Charge; Tuesday, Great Exhibition of Hallelujah Lasses; Wednesday, Fire and Brimstone, &c.; and Sunday, Descent of the Holy Ghost, Tremendous Free and Easy, Great Charge of the Devil and Hallelujah Gallop, deserves a severer rebuke than that bestowed upon it by the peer who has devoted so much of his life to the promotion of the material and spiritual welfare of the poorer classes. But, passing from the lowest to the highest, may it not be asked whether within the pale of the Church of England one does not often witness scenes which are calculated to produce great irreverence of thought, expression, and action, turning religion into a play, and making it grotesque.
